
THE PEOPLE'S PATRIOT PROJECT

PATRIOT PRESS

"We remember those who were called upon to give all a person can give, and we remember those who were prepared to make that sacrifice if it were demanded of them in the line of duty, though it never was. Most of all, we remember the devotion and gallantry with which all of them ennobled their nation as they became champions of a noble cause."

- Ronald Reagan

We the People...

WE, THE PEOPLE, THE PEOPLE'S PATRIOT PROJECT, have adopted the Mission of Honoring and Empowering those who have served by being the shock and awe when combating the silent and deadly enemy of our veterans and first responders, the enemy that leaves mortal and invisible wounds.

CORE VALUES

- Aid those who sacrificed for us
- Support the families of civil servants
- Heal the traumas of service
- Share the burdens of our community
- Create opportunities for Patriots

OUR VISION

Our Vision is to provide a community and network of support, with the necessary tools, insights, and resources to aid in the rehabilitation of veteran and current service members and civil servants to go through a recovery process and transition into real-world opportunities and situations.

WE want to help provide more fulfilling life memories and experiences by providing resources and facilities that will show an appreciation for the sacrifices and service these members have already provided to our country and community. Adding to their memories and experiences for the main purpose as they have sacrificed their livelihood to promote the life securities and freedoms we all share as Americans.

WE DO WHAT WE DO IN THE NAME OF HONOR FOR THOSE WHO HAVE SERVED; COMBATING THE SILENT, INVISIBLE, AND DEADLY ENEMY OF OUR VETERANS AND FIRST RESPONDERS, THE ENEMY THAT LEAVES MORTAL AND INVISIBLE WOUNDS.

BETH KING SOCIAL MEDIA MANAGER

Walking the Road Together: A Journey of Service, Healing, and Purpose

It's an incredible honor to introduce myself as a new member of The People's Patriot Project. Becoming part of this mission-driven organization feels like both a natural next step and a full-circle moment in a journey that began over two decades ago.

In 2002, I started volunteering with the USO at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C. Like so many others, I felt a deep pull to support our service members in any way I could. At the time, I didn't realize just how life-changing that experience would become.

While volunteering, I met my husband, James King, who had recently been evacuated after being severely injured by an IED blast in Ramadi, Iraq in 2004. His injuries were extensive, life-altering, and painful – physically and emotionally. He often says that moment was both the worst and best thing that ever happened to him. The worst, for the obvious reasons: pain, trauma, and an uncertain future. But the best, because it led us to each other. From that hospital room and those early, uncertain days, we built a life grounded in love, service, and purpose. Today, we have three beautiful children and a shared passion for the veteran community that continues to shape our lives.

Over the past 20 years, James and I have been actively involved in a variety of efforts aimed at supporting veterans, service members, and their families. From advocacy to peer support, from behind-the-scenes organizing to boots-on-the-ground outreach – we've seen firsthand both the heartbreaking needs and the incredible strength within the veteran population

In the last two years especially, our mission has taken on even greater clarity. Together, we have been building a veteran-centered community that promotes healing through laughter, authentic connection, and peer support. We've learned that humor – even dark, messy, irreverent humor – is often one of the most powerful tools for healing. When veterans gather and feel safe enough to be themselves, without judgment or pressure, they begin to open up. They begin to heal. And so do the families around them.

This journey has brought us into contact with many remarkable individuals and organizations that are committed to the same vision – one that recognizes a simple but profound truth:

“It takes a warrior to heal a community, and a community to heal a warrior.”

The mental health crisis facing veterans today is too big for any one group to fix alone. We've always believed that real impact happens when we come together – when we lay down egos, combine resources, and commit to collaboration over competition. Veterans and their families don't need fragmented services; they need a united front.

That's why joining The People's Patriot Project means so much to me. This organization isn't just about checking boxes or raising awareness. It's about action. It's about creating a space where veterans are seen, heard, and truly supported. It's about showing up consistently and standing in the gap – whether through outreach, education, advocacy, or simply being there when someone needs to know they're not alone.

As I step into this new role, I bring with me not only years of experience but a heart that understands the highs and lows of this life. I've seen the impact of trauma, the strain it puts on families, and the long road toward healing. But I've also seen the power of community, the strength of those who refuse to give up, and the beauty that comes from shared purpose. I'm excited for the journey ahead and grateful for the opportunity to serve alongside the incredible team at The People's Patriot Project. Together, we can do more than support veterans – we can change lives.

LAUREN IOZZIO
FINANCIAL OFFICER

As a proud dependent of a U.S. veteran, I've built both my life and career around the core principles of service, education, and empowerment. I hold a Bachelor of Arts degree in Anthropology and Sociology from Texas A&M University and a Master of Science Degree in Social Justice and Criminology from Delta State University. Through my studies, I developed a strong passion for examining the ways in which cultural backgrounds, personal trauma, and systemic barriers influence people's lives, opportunities, and mindsets. I've always been driven by a desire to not only help people but to truly understand how our environments, histories, and experiences shape who we become.

Throughout my career, I've worn many hats, all centered around teaching, mentoring, and leadership development. I've served as a K-8 classroom teacher on the Pine Ridge Reservation for 5 years, where I worked closely with Indigenous youth to support culturally responsive education and self-determination. I also have the privilege of teaching as an undergraduate professor at Delta State University, where I guide students through complex social justice issues with empathy and academic rigor. In my current role as a Coaching Consultant with ThinkVirtues, I work with veterans nationwide, helping them reconnect with their purpose and navigate personal and professional transitions.

Additionally, I serve as the Financial Officer for The People's Patriot Project and am the face behind this Newsletter—both new roles that allow me to give back to the veteran community in a meaningful and sustainable way. In this capacity, I help steward resources that support mental and emotional health, resilience, and empowerment programs for veterans and their families.

My work is grounded in a lifelong commitment to learning, growth, and personal development. I believe deeply in the power of education, authenticity, self-actualization, and self-determination as tools for personal and community transformation. Supporting those who have served is not just a mission—it's a personal calling rooted in gratitude, purpose, and a desire to honor the legacy of those who've given so much.

Let us show up for ourselves so that we may show up for others!
